

TERMINATION POLICY

Definition:

Termination of employment is an employee's departure from a job and the end of an employee's duration with an employer. Termination may be voluntary on the employee's part, or it may be at the hands of the employer, often in the form of dismissal or a layoff.

TERMINATION POLICY IN OUR ORGANIZATION

Termination of Employment with our organization

Any person working at our organization is abide to employee contract signed by accepting the appointment letter. Which also clearly state the person will need to comply the policies made by company during their engagement with the organisation, but not limited to his separation from the company after his engagement with the company is over, wherever applicable.

NOTICE OF TERMINATION OF SERVICE AND SUSPENSION

- In line with local practice, the following notice of termination of employment will be given by the Company, without being required to assign any reason, in writing: one month.
- In case company requires you to complete the pending tasks or work on existing assignment for extended period beyond one month looking at companies or customers interest, you will be abide to serve the extended notice period. At any given point in company reserve the right to decide your notice period time based on companies interest.
- Every person working with TPL will need to complete all exit procedures and follow exit policies
- During the probationary period, termination of employment may be made by the Company with seven days' notice in writing without being required to assign any reason.
- In cases of gross misconduct or other fundamental breach of contract by you, the Company reserves the right to terminate employment without notice or payment in lieu of notice.
- Members of staff will be required to give at least two months' notice of termination of employment, in writing, regardless of their length service or whether or not they are in their probationary period.

- You are not allowed any leave during your notice period. In case of any leave during notice period may be considered as your last working day in the organisation and may terminate you from your services with immediate effect.
- The Company may, in its absolute discretion, suspend you at any time from the performance of all or any of your duties for such periods and on such terms as it considers expedient to allow it or any regulatory authority to undertake any investigation including, but not limited to, any investigation under the disciplinary procedure or into any alleged breach of regulatory requirements
-

Employment of person can be terminated by organisation

- Exit process is mandatory for everyone working at our Organization, including interns, contractors, employees on probation period and full time employed. Everyone should be literally taken in this case.
- Exit process is mandatory for everyone even if they have worked for one day or for that matter for even few hours in our organization premises.
- Anyone not completing the exit process as per Exit policy will be terminated under the reason 'absconding from duties' from the company and company may take legal action against such person for not submitting companies assets or not signing exit process documents.
- Exit process is mandatory even if, person moving out from one legal entity of our organization to another our organization entity.
- Exit process is mandatory to person, who is terminated for any reason from the company
- Exit process is mandatory to person, who will be retired from the company for any reason.
- In case person failed to complete the exit process due to any valid reason like, asset missing/ lost or damaged or any other disputed matter, company can complete the exit process only after CEO/CTOs approval.